

The best photo from each entry

The judges were very impressed by the quality of the entries for the King's photo essay contest this year. To thank everyone for participating, we wanted to highlight each entrant. Here is a collection of the best photos from each entry.

Thank you to everyone who submitted a photo essay. You made this year's competition rich with variety and talent.

Anika Panet-Carino

Toronto, Ont.

A hawk and horse are building a mutually beneficial relationship. The hawk rests on the horse while the hawk eats the insects around the horse. Each provides a service unattainable otherwise. Photo shot in Costa Rica.

Charlene Hatcher

Kingston, N.S.

Two Birds Sweets and Treats serves up an arrangement of sweet treats at the Wolfville Farmers Market.

Ian Curran

St. Stephen, N.B.

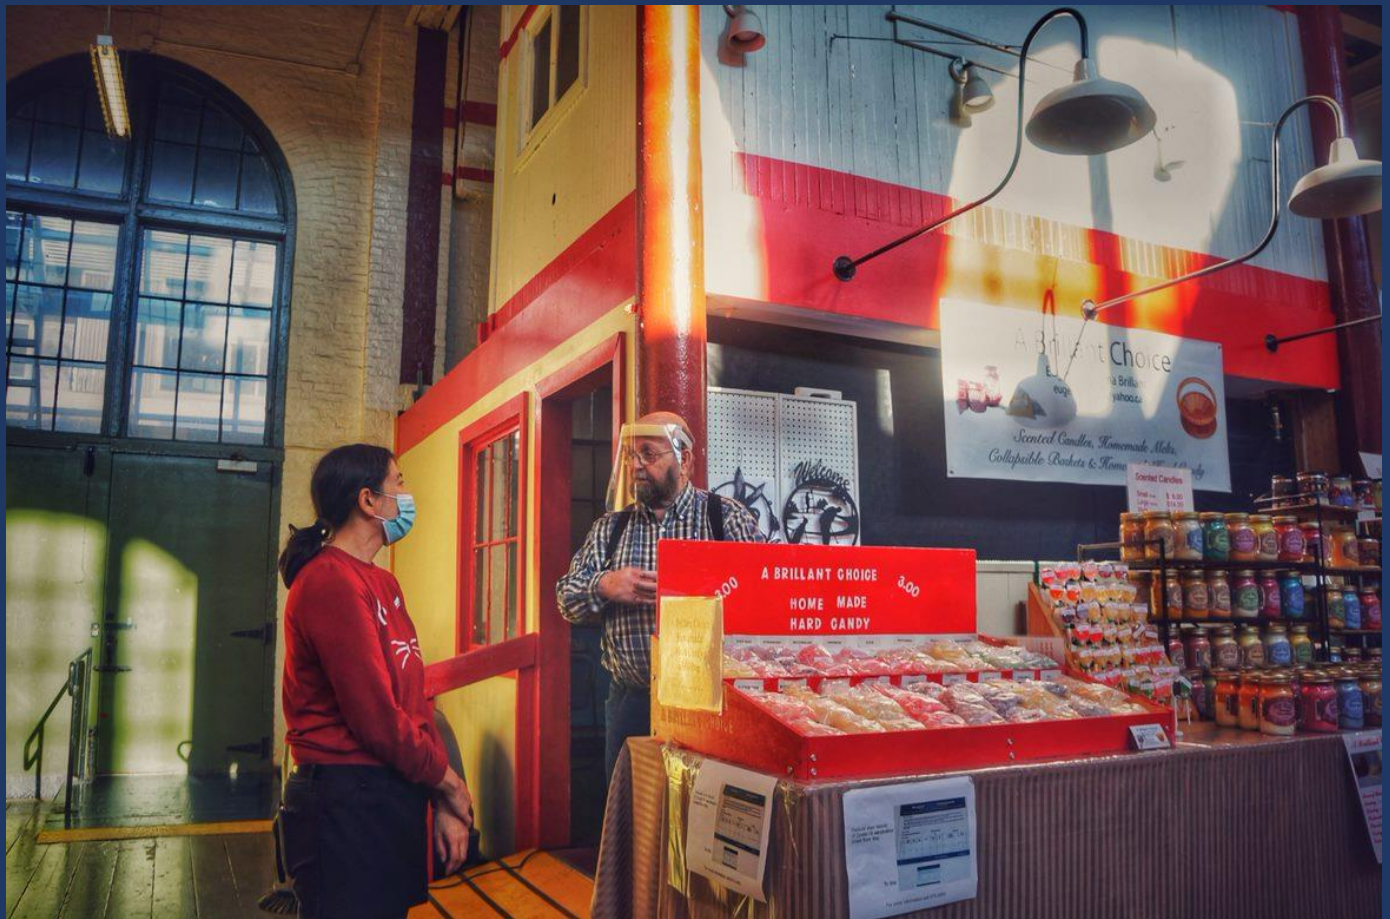

Micah Landry, a computer science student, comfortably works away on a worldwide Cyber Titan cybersecurity competition.

Jenna Olsen
Guelph, Ont.

My favourite photo I've ever taken of Bianca. The joy on her face is palpable. The album SOUR by Olivia Rodrigo inspired this photo.

Joanna Daramola
Saint John, N.B.

Two shop owners at the Saint John City Market engage in a pleasant, playful banter as the consumer traffic lulls on a chilly Saturday afternoon.

Joanna Daramola

Note: We couldn't decide between Joanna's two photos because they are both excellent but quite different. Therefore, we highlighted both of them.

Cars drive through the time-tested Water Street on a Monday morning. This street was greatly affected by the 1877 Great Fire of Saint John.

Jody Connors

Toronto, Ont.

The Face of Change: While all the outdoor fun provides you with a much-needed escape, it is important to recognize that Covid-19 is still a large part of our reality. Masks and hand sanitizer were new additions to the skating routines of many this year.

Kate James
Halifax, N.S.

A Christmas wreath dangles from a tree at People's Park.

Skylene MacGillivray

Cape George, N.S.

One of the best sunset spots on the coast, this beach is usually dotted with people at sunset. On this day, the only ones on the beach were the seagulls.

Sophie Cullen

Edina, Minn.

Sinister Clouds: My neighbours' houses and ours sit on ranches located a couple of miles away from a mountain where the clouds often weave their way through the different valleys in the mountain range. Photo shot in Taos, N.M..

Yutong (Jennifer) Liang
Halifax, N.S.

I walked along the road to downtown Halifax. Here is the small corner behind the chapel, where a piping heater ran out of the exhaust hole. On a quiet snowing winter day, these "moving" heaters add a sense of an active atmosphere.

Yvonne Wu
Oakville, Ont.

A storm water management pond for homeowners who want a “view.” While frozen over in the winter, several Canada Geese families and their duck cousins call this home in the summer.
