

Our Favourite Photos from the Contest

For the past three years we've hosted the King's photo essay contest, we like to highlight excellent photos from the contestants, whether they won or not. This year, we've received entries from across Canada and internationally. Here is a small collection of our favourite photos.

Anjolaoluwa Fagunwa

Halifax, N.S.

One of the first things that caught my eyes about Halifax was autumn. The different shades of retired leaves always brought joy to my heart, and if it were up to me, autumn would be a year-round season.

Brooklynn Livingstone

Guelph, Ont.

As the day continues on, Guelph offers a royal sight of a painted sky. The Basilica of Our Lady Immaculate completed in 1888 rests in the distance, a historical monument in the city.

Graydon German

Calgary, Alta.

A puma kills and is eating a guanaco in Patagonia National Park in Argentina.

Griffin Dauphinee

Barrie, Ont.

A black diamond run at Snow Valley ski resort in Minesing, Ont. has all of its snow melted in early January. Climate change has been shortening the ski season.

Logan Mitchell

Calgary, Alta.

Much like breaking trail of fresh snow, life in the Rocky Mountains is an experience of constant discovery. The vast landscape offers endless possibilities for adventure, so there is always a new path to forge through the snow.

Prin Chotiprasidhi

Bangkok, Thailand

“Gong!!!” The gong sound echoes across the arrays of salt farming pans, followed by cheerful claps and bright smiles on the faces of hundreds of salt farmers in SamutSakorn. The gong is the sign of the new beginning of the year’s salt farming season and also represents good luck for a season full of sunshine with no off-season rainfall.
